A STRANCE PARTY.—The members of the new French Cabinet were so little acquainted with each other at their first session that they were compelled to introduce each other. This recalls a sericature of Garvarni, in which two individuals are represented as at the dose of a saloon putting on their gloves. One says to the other, "Present me first, and afterwards I will introduce you."

Too Taux.—Life may be fairly divided into the seasons of hope and fear. In youth we hope everything may be right, in age we fear everything may be wrong.

Covery made sail for Port Royal, together; where they arrived. The Nancy was continued to the season of their session that the two British cruizers shared equally in the prize.
